

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Plaintiff/Respondent,

vs.

CASEY D. BECKHAM,

Defendant/Petitioner.

No. 2:09-CR-0146-LRS-1

No. 2:09-CR-0167-LRS-1

ORDER GRANTING MOTIONS TO VACATE SENTENCE; VACATING JUDGMENTS

BEFORE THE COURT are Petitioner Casey D. Beckham's Motions to Vacate his sentence filed pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255 and with the assistance of counsel in both the above referenced cases. (ECF No. 62 in 09-146 and ECF No. 47 in 09-167). The United States as Respondent has responded in opposition (ECF No. 66). Petitioner filed a Reply (ECF No. 67), an "Amendment" to the Motion (ECF No. 68), and a Declaration re: Supplemental Authority (ECF No. 71). Oral argument was heard on July 7, 2016. (ECF No. 70).

ORDER - 1

1 Petitioner asks the court to vacate his sentences because he was sentenced
2 pursuant to the Armed Career Criminal Act (ACCA) in violation of the Supreme
3 Court's decision in Johnson v. United States, 135 S.Ct. 2251 (2015). Johnson
4 invalidated the so-called "residual clause" of the ACCA. Specifically, Petitioner
5 contends that his prior Washington state convictions for first and second degree
6 burglary no longer qualify as "violent felonies" in light of Johnson. Petitioner 7 contends that he therefore no longer has three predicate convictions supporting his 8 classification as an Armed Career Criminal. Petitioner's "Amendment" to the 9 Motion alternatively argues his sentences are unlawful on the basis that his 10 "Guideline range was enhanced on the basis of the now-unconstitutional residual 11 clause" under U.S.S.G. §4B1.2(a).

16 I. Background

17

18 In October 2009, Beckham was charged by Indictment in Cause No. 09-CR-146-
19 LRS with two counts of felon in possession of a firearm in violation of 18 U.S.C. §
20 922(g), possession and sale of a stolen firearm, and possession of an unregistered
21 firearm. Typically these offenses were subject to a statutory maximum penalty of 22 ten years' imprisonment and 3 years of supervised release. 18 U.S.C. § 924(a)(2). A
23 defendant is subject to an enhanced sentence under the ACCA, however, if he has 24
26

1 three or more convictions committed on occasions different from one another that
2 qualify as a “violent felony” or a “serious drug offense,” as defined in the ACCA.
3 Id. § 924(e)(1). Beckham was notified that an ACCA offender faces 15 years' to life
4 imprisonment and a maximum 5-year term of supervised release. Id.

6 In December 2009, Beckham was indicted in a second case, Cause No. 09-CR-
7 167-LRS on charges of distribution of 5 grams or more actual (pure)
8 methamphetamine, in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1) and possession with intent
9 to distribute 50 grams or more of actual methamphetamine. On these charges,
10 Beckham faced mandatory minimum 5 and 10 years imprisonment respectively.
11

12 The parties entered into a Plea Agreement pursuant to Fed.R.Crim.P. 11(c)(1)(C)
13 with a comprehensive resolution of both Indictments. Beckham agreed to plead
14 guilty to one count of felon in possession of a firearm and the distribution charge,
15 and the Government agreed to dismiss all of the remaining charges in both 16 Indictments. The parties stipulated that a sentence of 188 months imprisonment 17 followed by a 10-year term of supervised release “is an appropriate disposition of 18 this case.” (ECF No. 37 at 19). The plea agreement articulated Beckham’s criminal
19 history as having 28 prior felonies and his ACCA exposure listing five Washington
20 state first and second degree burglary convictions. (ECF No. 37 at 18).
21
23
24
25
26

1 If accepted, this type of agreement would bind the court to the parties'
2 recommendation. The Government reserved the right to withdraw from the plea
3 agreement "if the Court imposes a lesser sentence than agreed upon" and the 4 Defendant reserved the option to withdraw if the court imposes a harsher sentence.
5 Beckham also explicitly agreed that:
6

8 Should the Defendant successfully move to withdraw from this Plea Agreement
9 or should the Defendant's conviction...be dismissed, set aside, vacated, or 10 reversed, this Plea Agreement shall become null and void; and the United States
11 may prosecute the Defendant on all available charges involving or arising from 12 the possession and distribution of controlled substances, possession and unlawful 13 sale of firearms and ammunition, and possession and use of firearms in 14 furtherance of drug trafficking.

15
16 Id. at ¶ 20.

17 The Presentence Report concluded that Beckham qualified as a career offender
18 under the U.S. Sentencing Guidelines and an Armed Career Criminal under ACCA
19 based upon his four Second Degree Burglary (RCW 9A.52.030-F) and First Degree
20 Burglary (RCW 9A.52.020(1)(a)-(f)) convictions. The PSR grouped the counts
21 together for purposes of the Guideline calculation and concluded the Final Offense
22 Level was 33, the Criminal History category VI, and the Guidelines Range 235 to 23 293 months (i.e. 19- 24 years). Defendant objected to the ACCA finding and the 24 parties briefed the issue. The objection was overruled at a combined sentencing
25
26

27 ORDER - 4
28

1 hearing on the two Indictments. The court accepted the parties' Plea Agreement and
2 Beckham was sentenced to two 188-month terms of imprisonment, each to run
3 concurrent with one another, and concurrent terms of supervised release of 10 years
4 (the maximum under ACCA on the firearm count) and 5 years on the drug count.
5

6 Beckham did not appeal his sentence.
7

8 II. STANDARD OF REVIEW

9

10 The relief authorized by 28 U.S.C. § 2255 "does not encompass all claimed errors
11 in conviction and sentencing." United States v. Addonizio, 442 U.S. 178, 185 (1979).
12 Rather, such a motion may be brought on the following grounds: (1) the sentence
13 was imposed in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States; (2) the 14 court was without jurisdiction to impose the sentence; (3) the sentence was in excess 15 of the maximum authorized by law; or (4) the sentence is otherwise subject to 16 collateral attack. § 2255(a); see also United States v. Berry, 624 F.3d 1031, 1038
17 (9th Cir. 2010).
19
20

21 III. ANALYSIS

22

23 Petitioner argues Johnson removed his burglary offenses from the scope of § 24 924(e)'s definition of "violent felony," which precludes his qualification under 25 ACCA. He contends his sentence on the firearm charge (both the term of 26

1 imprisonment and supervised release) exceed the statutory maximums permitted by 2 law. Petitioner argues that since the firearm and gun sentences were “part of the 3 same package,” he must be resentenced in both cases. Beckham does not seek to 4 withdraw his guilty pleas or void the entire plea agreement.
5

6 A. ACCA Enhanced Sentence

7 Respondent does not dispute that Petitioner’s sentence on the firearm count
8 was pursuant to the ACCA. ACCA gives three definitions of “violent felony.” First,
9 § 924(e)(2)(B)(i) refers to any offense that “has as an element the use, attempted use,
10 or threatened use of physical force against the person of another.” This is known as 11 the “elements clause.” Second, § 924(e)(2)(B)(ii) covers any offense that “is 12 burglary, arson, or extortion, involves use of explosives, or otherwise involves 13 conduct that presents a serious potential risk of physical injury to another.” The first
14 9 words of that subsection are called the “enumerated crimes clause,” and the last 13
15 are called the “residual clause.” Johnson held that ACCA’s “residual clause” is 16 unconstitutional. This rule applies retroactively to cases on collateral review. See 17 Welch v. United States, __ U.S. __, __, 136 S. Ct. 1257, 1268 (2016).
18
20
21

23 After Johnson, Petitioner’s first and second degree burglary convictions meet
24 none of these definitions. Although the PSR and this court did not specify which 25 definition it relied upon, the Government specifically argued at sentencing that 26
27 ORDER - 6
28

1 ACCA's residual clause applied. (ECF No. 48 at 6). At the time of Petitioner's
2 sentencing, the Government acknowledged that the Ninth Circuit had already held
3 in U.S. v. Wenner, 351 F.3d 969 (9th Cir. 2003) that Washington's burglary statute
4 did not categorically qualify as a generic burglary under the enumerated offense
5 clause. Since then, this court, and others, have continued to hold that Washington's 6 second degree burglary is not a categorical match for "generic burglary" and because
7 the statute is indivisible, broader than "generic burglary" and is indivisible, it
8 therefore can't be an ACCA predicate under the enumerated clause of ACCA. See
9 U.S. v. Gray, EDWA Cause No. 06-CR-2017-LRS; cf. Mathis v. United States, 136
10 S.Ct. 2243 (June 23, 2016) (holding that Iowa burglary is not "categorical burglary"
11 as the elements of Iowa burglary law are broader than those of generic burglary").
12 Like its second degree counterpart, Washington's first degree burglary statute
13 encompasses the same broader definition (of "building") and thus is not a generic
14 burglary. Finally, neither Washington's first or second degree burglary statute have 15 violent force as an element.

16 The Johnson decision dictates that Petitioner's prior burglary convictions
17 cannot be used to designate Petitioner as an Armed Career Criminal. As a result,
18 Petitioner's 188-month sentence on the firearm count exceeds the maximum 19 authorized sentence as a non-ACCA offender under § 922(g)(1) by 68 months.

1 Petitioner's 5-year supervised release term exceeds the maximum authorized
2 sentence by 2 years.

3
4 B. Concurrent Sentence and Sentencing Package Doctrines

5 Respondent contends the court should have declined review of the merits of 6 this Petition under the concurrent sentence doctrine. The doctrine provides the court
7 with discretion not to reach the merits of a claim attacking fewer than all multiple
8 concurrent sentences if success on the claim would not have any collateral
9 consequences or change the term of imprisonment. See, e.g., Benton v. Maryland,
10 89 S.Ct. 2056, 2059–61 (1969); Barnes v. United States, 230 F.3d 1362 (8th Cir.
11 2000) (affirming the district court's use of the concurrent-sentence doctrine to 12 decline to address the merits of the defendant's § 2255 claim). Respondent contends 13 that because the Petitioner was sentenced to concurrent terms of imprisonment of 14 188 months, habeas relief on the firearm sentence will have no effect on Petitioner's
15 time in custody.

16
17 The concurrent sentence doctrine has been described by the Supreme Court as 18 "haphazardly [] applied" and "without...any satisfactory explanation," other than as 19 a "rule of judicial convenience." Benton v. Maryland, 395 U.S. 784, 789–91 (1969).
20 It has been completely abandoned by the Ninth Circuit in the context of direct 21 appeals because declining review "for reasons of judicial economy, impinges upon 22
24
25
26
27
28

1 the defendant's statutory right." U.S. v. De Bright, 730 F.2d 1255 (9th Cir. 1984).
2 Only the 11th Circuit has extended the doctrine to the post-Johnson §2255 context.
3 See In re Williams, 2016 WL 3460899, at *5 (11th Cir. June 24, 2016). This case is 4 not analogous to In re Williams, as it is not a case involving a mandatory life sentence
5 or a concurrent sentence "unrelated to" the ACCA sentence. See e.g., In re Davis,
6 206 WL 4070987 (11th Cir. July 21, 2016)(declining to apply Williams where "the 7 judge sentenced [the Defendant] based on a single Sentencing Guidelines range for 8 [Defendant's] ACCA violation combined with his conspiracy crime.")).
9

11
12 The court rejects application of the concurrent sentence doctrine on the facts
13 of this case. The Sentencing Guidelines calculation in this case was a single 14 calculation grouping both counts of conviction together. The court consulted the 15 Guidelines in deciding whether to accept the plea agreement. This court's
16 sentencing decision on the drug count was no doubt informed by Petitioner's ACCA
17 designation. Accordingly, it is not clear Petitioner did not suffer adverse collateral
18 legal consequences from the unlawful sentence.
19

22 Furthermore, the "sentencing package" doctrine permits the court to revisit
23 both the firearm and drug sentences because the sentences imposed. A "sentencing 24 package," consists of interdependent components of a single unified sentencing
25
26

1 scheme. See United States v. Ruiz-Alvarez, 211 F.3d 1181, 1185 (9th Cir.2000)
2 (noting that when a conviction is vacated, the district court “may recalculate and
3 resentence the defendant on convictions that still stand”); United States v. Barron,
4 172 F.3d 1153, 1160 (9th Cir.1999) (en banc) (holding that when a plea conviction
5 is vacated the court should not set aside the plea agreement, but rather should 6 resentence the defendant on the remaining counts, “taking into account any relevant
7 enhancements under the Sentencing Guidelines”); United States v. Handa, 122 F.3d
8 690, 692 (9th Cir.1997) (holding that when part of the sentencing “package” is set 9 aside, “the district court is free to put together a new package reflecting its 10 considered judgment as to the punishment the defendant deserves for the crimes of 11 which he is still convicted”); see also, United States v. Gordils, 117 F.3d 99, 102 12 (2nd Cir. 1997) (explaining “the district court's power extends not just to the 13 conviction attacked by a defendant but to an aggregate ... term of imprisonment”);
14 Pasquarille v. United States, 130 F.3d 1220, 1222 (6th Cir. 1997); U.S. v. Watkins, 15 147 F.3d 1294, 1297 (11th Cir. 1998)(when the “sentencing package [becomes]
16 ‘unbundled,’ ” the district court has the authority to “recalculate and reconsider [the 17 defendant's] sentence for it to comport with the district court's original intentions at 18 sentencing.”). The purpose of the sentencing package doctrine is to allow the 19 district court “to resentence in order to carry out its original intent, regardless of the 20
21
22
23
24
25
26

28

1 parties' machinations." U.S. v. Catrell, 774 F.3d 666, 671 (10th Cir. 2014)(emphasis
2 in original).

3
4 The court acknowledges that difficult questions exist regarding the breadth of 5 the "sentencing package" doctrine. It is well established in cases involving direct 6 appeals of sentences with interdependent, consecutive counts of a single indictment.
7
8 However, more complex issues arise when the context involves the interplay
9 between Rule 11(c)(1)(C) plea agreements and multiple-count, concurrent
10 convictions, involving separate Indictments and sentences set aside in §2255
11 proceedings.¹ The Tenth Circuit has held that the sentencing package doctrine can 12

14 ¹ At least one court has held that if the court accepts a Rule 11(c)(1)(C) agreement, 15 and a defendant later seeks to challenge the legality of his sentence, he must 16 challenge the validity of the entire agreement, not simply one provision. United 17 States v. Barnes, 83 F.3d 934, 941 (7th Cir.1996) ("If we rule that some provision
18 of the plea agreement is invalid, we must discard the entire agreement and require
19 her and the government to begin their bargaining all over again. We cannot preserve 20 one part of her bargain—the government's promise to drop [some] charges—and 21 discard another—her promise to serve ... sentences on [other] charges."); United 22 States v. Peterson, 268 F.3d 533, 534 (7th Cir. 2001)("The whole plea agreement
23 stands, or the whole thing falls."); U.S. v. Gibson, 490 F.3d 604, 607-608 (7th Cir.
24 2007)(affirming the voiding of the entire agreement and remanding for further 25
26
27
28

1 apply to sentences crafted pursuant to Rule 11(c)(1)(C). U.S. v. Catrell, 774 F.3d
2 666 (10th Cir. 2014). The court is unaware of any Ninth Circuit precedent in this
3 precise context, though a complete survey of the cases reveals one Ninth Circuit
4 panel which was “not persuaded that the ‘accept it or reject it’ nature of the Rule
5 [11(c)(1)(C)] plea” deprives the court of the ability to recalculate and adjust
6 sentences on multiple counts of conviction. U.S. v. Livingston, 2002 WL 460820 (9th
7 Cir. 2002)(unpublished and not cited for precedential value).

10
11 Ultimately, given the imposition of an unlawful sentence, it is the obligation
12 of this court to fashion relief within the bounds of due process so as to ensure the 13 sentence comports with the court’s intentions and the law. Where the sentence (but 14 not the conviction) is infirm, the options open to the court are to re-sentence or 15 correct the sentence. Because the sentencing scheme in these cases has been 16 disrupted by incorporation of an unlawful ACCA-enhanced sentence, resentencing 17 on both the firearm and drug offenses is the most appropriate form of relief in these 18 circumstances.
